A delicious earthy pepper that started the natural super-hot chile category. Bhut {?spirit or past, often angry, soul} Jolokia {?chile?} is the ?Ghost? chile of recent notoriety, unseating the Chile Habanero as the now formerly ?hottest? chile. This hybridized chile of Capsicum chinense and frutescen varieties is known by many names {Bih Jolokia, ?Bih? meaning ?poison in Assamese?; Naga Mirchi or King Cobra Chilli; Naga Jolokia, named after the fierce headhunter warriors in Nagaland; Naga Morich; etc. } and for many years was merely an unsubstantiated ?myth? as the chiles never left the off-limit Northeastern Indian states of Assam, Manipur, and Nagaland, the warring tribal area next to Myanmar (Burma); above Bangladesh and beneath Bhutan (possibly where ?bhut? derived).
